Special Notice.

All contributions are attentively considered, but owing to the number of MSS. and letters received, the Editors cannot undertake to reply to correspondents at once, or before any specified date, or to write a criticism upon ineligible contributions, or explain their reason for non-acceptance.

New Correspondents.

It would save trouble if those who propose to contribute would write to the Editors in the first instance, stating the subject of the paper, and leaving it open to them to reply only in case of there being a prospect of space in the Magazine for a contribution of such a kind. Absence of reply might thus be taken to denote either that the subject proposed was unsuitable or already treated, or that there was no space vacant within reasonable prospect for such a paper.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The concluding chapters of "Too Red a Dawn" are so arranged as to be ready, when complete, for binding into a volume with the numbers which contain the remaining portion of the novel.
